Preface

MPE/iX, Multiprogramming Executive with Integrated POSIX, is the latest in a series of forward-compatible operating systems for the HP 3000 line of computers.

In HP documentation and in talking with HP 3000 users, you will encounter references to MPE XL, the direct predecessor of MPE/iX. MPE/iX is a superset of MPE XL. All programs written for MPE XL will run without change under MPE/iX. You can continue to use MPE XL system documentation, although it may not refer to features added to the operating system to support POSIX (for example, hierarchical directories).

Finally, you may encounter references to MPE V, which is the operating system for HP 3000s, not based on PA-RISC architecture. MPE V software can be run on the PA-RISC (Series 900) HP 3000s in what is known as compatibility mode.

Conventions

UPPERCASE In a syntax statement, commands and keywords are shown in uppercase characters. The characters must be entered in the order shown; however, you can enter the characters in either uppercase or lowercase. For example:

COMMAND

can be entered as any of the following:

command          Command          COMMAND

It cannot, however, be entered as:

comm                  com_mand          command

italics In a syntax statement or an example, a word in italics represents a parameter or argument that you must replace with the actual value. In the following example, you must replace filename with the name of the file:

COMMAND *filename

bold italics In a syntax statement, a word in bold italics represents a parameter that you must replace with the actual value. In the following example, you must replace filename with the name of the file:

COMMAND(filename)

punctuation In a syntax statement, punctuation characters (other than brackets, braces, vertical bars, and ellipses) must be entered exactly as shown. In the following example, the parentheses and colon must be entered:

(filename):(filename)

underlining Within an example that contains interactive dialog, user input and user responses to prompts are indicated by underlining. In the following example, yes is the user's response to the prompt:

Do you want to continue? >> yes

{ } In a syntax statement, braces enclose required elements. When several elements are stacked within braces, you must select one. In the following example, you must select either ON or OFF:

COMMAND { ON } { OFF }

[ ] In a syntax statement, brackets enclose optional elements. In the following example, OPTION can be omitted:

COMMAND filename [OPTION]

When several elements are stacked within brackets, you can select one or none of the elements. In the following example, you can select OPTION or parameter or neither. The elements cannot be repeated.

COMMAND filename [ OPTION
                                  parameter ]

Conventions (continued)

[ ... ] In a syntax statement, horizontal ellipses enclosed in brackets indicate that you can repeatedly select the element(s) that appear with the immediately preceding pair of brackets or braces. In the example below, you can select parameter zero or more times. Each instance of parameter must be preceded by a comma:

[, parameter] [...]

In the example below, you only use the comma as a delimiter if parameter is repeated; no comma is used before the first occurrence of parameter:

[parameter] [, ...]

| ... | In a syntax statement, horizontal ellipses enclosed in vertical bars indicate that you can select more than one element within the immediately preceding pair of brackets or braces. However, each particular element can only be selected once. In the following example, you must select A, AB, BA, or B. The elements cannot be repeated.

... In an example, horizontal or vertical ellipses indicate where portions of an example have been omitted.

Δ In a syntax statement, the space symbol Δ shows a required blank. In the following example, parameter and parameter must be separated with a blank:

(parameter)Δ(parameter)

 The symbol  indicates a key on the keyboard. For example,  represents the carriage return key or  represents the shift key.

 character  character indicates a control character. For example,  Y means that you press the control key and the character key simultaneously.

Using This Manual

The BSTORE listing provides a list of all files associated with a given product. It can be useful when trying to isolate problems during an installation. For example:

- Product is installed and will not execute because it cannot find file “X”. Check the BSTORE to see if file “X” is actually a file associated with that product or if it is a file from a dependent product. A list of files can be retrieved from the SUBSYS tape and checked for the presence of file “X.” Using the BSTORE to locate the file will help isolate the problem.
- A patch installation is performed and the installation job completes normally, but you are unable to coldload from the tape created. Check the way the segment or program was installed in the installation job versus what is shown in the BSTORE listing. Look for the segment or program name in the TARGFILE section. If BSTORE shows the filename, and its installation matches the way it was done during the installation job, then the patch installation was performed properly. If not, modify the installation job to match the BSTORE listing and restream the job.

There are numerous ways the BSTORE can be useful. If a problem is encountered with a product, see if the BSTORE listing can be used to gather data, answer some initial questions, or isolate problems before contacting your on-line support group.

Manual Contents

BSTORE is a database used to create the System Load Tape (SLT), the Fundamental Operating Software tape (FOS), and the Subsystem products tape (SUBSYS). BSTORE provides information on all files needed to run a product, including dependencies.

This manual contains four separate listings, each containing BSTORE file information sorted in different ways:

MASTER PRODUCT LIST

This section provides a list of all products integrated in the release and is sorted by product number. The Account field references where the files reside on the factory’s disk. The Lastdate field references the last date the product was submitted to an HP 3000 MIT.

TARGFILE LIST

This section lists all files associated with each product and is sorted by TARGFILE name. It gives immediate reference to a file to determine the particular product to which it belongs.

ORGFIL (Origin File) is the name of the file as it resides on the factory’s disk.

TARGFILE (Target File) is the name of the file as stored on the SLT, FOS, and SUBSYS tapes. TARGFILE represents the system program names for FILETYPEs SYSPROG, segment names with their segment options for FILETYPEs SL and USL, and entry-points for FILETYPEs, NL, UNL, XL, and UXL.

The FILETYPE identifies which files will be placed on the Master SLT, FOS and SUBSYS tapes:

TAPE	FILETYPE	DESTINATION
====	=====	=====
FOS	INCLUDE	TARGFILE
	FOS STORE	TARGFILE
	INTRINSIC	TARGFILE
	SYSINTR	TARGFILE
SUBSYS	USL	ORGFIL. USL. SYS
	STORE	TARGFILE
	UXL	ORGFIL. UXL. SYS
	UNL	ORGFIL. UNL. SYS
SLT	SL	SEGMENT
	SYSPROG	TARGFILE
	SYSCAT	TARGFILE
	NL	ENTRY PT
	XL	ENTRY PT
	TAPEBOOT	TARGFILE
	DISCBOOT	TARGFILE
	BOTHBOOT	TARGFILE
	AUTOBOOT	TARGFILE
	TAPEIPL	TARGFILE
	DISCIPL	TARGFILE
	BOTHIPL	TARGFILE
	SYS_DIAG	TARGFILE
	SYS_CONFIG	TARGFILE
	NMLIB	TARGFILE
	CMSL	TARGFILE
SLT	TARGFILE
PME_MASTER	PME NAME
PME_INCLUD	PME NAME

A detailed list of FILETYPEs can be found in the “FILETYPE Definitions” section.

A FILETYPE of STORE results in the TARGFILE filename appearing on the SUBSYS tape.

A FILETYPE of USL appears on the SUBSYS tape by the ORGFIL filename in the group and account USL.SYS.

A FILETYPE of UXL or UNL appears on the SUBSYS tape by the orgfile filename in the group and account of UXL.SYS or UNL.SYS respectively.

During the installation process, the INSTALLER sets up a SYSGEN dialog based on the contents of USL.SYS, UXL.SYS, and UNL.SYS. Only by coming up from the customized SLT will the SLs, XLs, NLs, and additional system programs be installed.

When customizing a SUBSYS tape, only those files designated as STORE, USL, UXL, and UNL files appear on the customized tape.

The SYSTYPE identifies the type of system where a file is used:

SYSTYPE	SYSTEM
=====	=====
COMMON	Common to all systems

PRODUCT NUMBER LIST

This section lists all files associated with each product and is sorted by product number. It is identical information to the TARGFILE list.

DEPENDENT PRODUCT LIST

The Dependent Product List defines product relationships; e.g., products which must be present for other products to function or support services which must be linked to specific software product numbers. This section is sorted by the Dependent Product number. The product listed to the right of the Dependent Product is a required portion of the product.

During customization, the dependent product list is searched for required products. The files from the required product are extracted from the first section of the database and placed on the customized SUBSYS tape. (This could be a multi-level search; Dependent Products may have more than one required product, and those required products may have dependencies of their own.)

FILETYPE Definitions

FOS STORE	FOS files (e.g., PXDB, SCOPEXL) - will reside on the FOS tape in TARGFILE format.
INTRINSIC	Files used to build the SPLINTR file - will become part of the SPLINTER.PUB.SYS file located on the FOS tape.
SL	Segmented Library files (e.g., KERNELC, LOADER, Language Libraries) - will reside in the SL.PUB.SYS on the SLT.
STORE	SUBSYS files (e.g., DISCCOPY, COBOL, MPMON) - will reside on the SUBSYS tape in TARGFILE format.
SYSCAT	System Catalog (CATALOG.PUB.SYS) - will reside on the the SLT.
SYSPROG	System Program Files (e.g., AUTOINST, INSTCAT) - will reside on the SLT.
USL	User Segmented Library files from purchasable products (e.g., CACHSEG, DSIOM) - will reside on the SUBSYS tape in USL.SYS. AUTOINST will install it in the system SL.
UXL	Relocatable library files - will reside on the SUBSYS tape. AUTOINST will install it in XL.PUB.SYS during installation.
UNL	Executable library files - will reside on the SUBSYS tape. AUTOINST will install it in NL.PUB.SYS during installation.
NL	FOS executable library files - will reside in the NL.PUB.SYS on the SLT.
XL	FOS relocatable library files - will reside in the XL.PUB.SYS on the SLT.
SYSINTR	Native mode intrinsic files - will reside in the SYSINTR.PUB.SYS file on the FOS tape.
INCLUDE	Files required by Native mode intrinsics - will reside on the FOS tape.
TAPEBOOT DISCBOOT BOTHBOOT AUTOBOOT TAPEIPL DISCIPL BOTHIPL SYS_DIAG SYS_CONFIG NMLIB CMSL SLT	Files used to create the bootable images - will reside on the SLT.

Master Product List

---

This section provides a listing of all products integrated into the release sorted by product number, and then by product description. It provides a reference to:

- The product number.
- The account where the ORGFILE resides.
- The product name (description).
- The V.U.F.
- The last date the product was submitted to an HP 3000 System Release.

Special Notes:

- The product numbers and descriptions in the Master Product List may not match those in CHART, but they may be useful reference when submitting Change Requests (CRs).
- Entries not carrying a standard numbering convention (e.g., HPxxxxx) are assemblies. Assemblies are called by other products in the manufacturing and customizing process.

TARFILE List

---

This section provides a listing of all files integrated into the release sorted by TARFILE name. It provides a reference to:

- The product number.
- The FILETYPE (defines what tape the file is on).
- The SYSTYPE (the type of system it is used by).
- The ORGFILE (filename on the factory's disc).
- The TARFILE (filename on the tape).

Product Number List

---

This section provides a listing of all files integrated into the release sorted by product number. It provides a reference to:

- The product number.
- The FILETYPE (defines what tape the file is on).
- The SYSTYPE (the type of system it is used by).
- The ORGFILE (filename on the factory's disk).
- The TARGFILE (filename on the tape).
